

Radical-Reflexivity and Transdisciplinarity as Paths to Developing Responsible Management Education Around Sustainability

The need for responsible management, particularly in relation to communities and the natural environment, has never been more urgent, as, by extension, is the need for responsible management education and learning (RMLE) around sustainability. The seminar addresses this issue by advocating an ecocentric approach to sustainability education grounded in radical-reflexivity and transdisciplinarity. Examples will be proposed of the innovative Integrated Education for Sustainability Masters Programme offered by the Center for Sustainability Studies at FGV.
